

Online Training Safety Code 6 - Basic Awareness

YRH now offers online safety code 6 basic training.

We are pleased to announce an exciting new addition to our Safety Code 6 training options: Basic Safety Code 6 awareness training is now available online.

The online format allows workers to complete the basic Safety Code 6 awareness training easily and on their own schedule. Ideal for tower riggers, telecommunications technicians and other personnel required to work near antennas. No previous experience is required.

Our training is Canadian-specific and is based on Canadian standards, rules and regulations. It covers the subjects of RF energy, maximum permitted exposure, safety gear and safe work practices in the RF environment.

Each participant can complete the training at their individual pace, by following a presentation and answering summary questions after each section. A final test must be completed in order to receive a completion certificate.

No minimum number of participants is required. We offer advantageous pricing for individual participants and for larger groups. The training is available in both French and English. Contact us for further information.
